

The Joseph C. Cornwall
Center for Metropolitan Studies

The Joseph C. Cornwall Center for Metropolitan Studies cordially invites you to our annual one-day conference:

“HEALTH IN THE NEWARK METROPOLITAN AREA: BEING WELL IN THE MIDST OF OPPORTUNITIES AND CHALLENGES”

Healthy people are the cornerstone of a healthy community. Who is accountable for insuring the health and wellness of people living and working in the Newark Metropolitan area? Without question, we all have a personal responsibility for maintaining our health. There are many things we can do individually to facilitate better health outcomes. But what role do or should educators, policy makers, community-based agencies, public institutions, researchers, and the health care system itself, play in maintaining a healthy community?

What: This one-day conference will explore the various dimensions, opportunities, and challenges, for maintaining good health and healthy lifestyles in the Newark Metropolitan area. The conference will examine: 1) strategies, opportunities, and challenges for maintaining good health from an individual, community, and government perspective, 2) health status and health issues in the Newark Metropolitan area, and, 3) health care system organization and responses to improve health outcomes in the region. The day will conclude with a “Where do we go from here?” session to share ideas and discuss ways we can work together to improve health status in the Newark Metropolitan area.

Who: Panelists will include community residents, health professionals, researchers, policy makers, and community-based leaders. All community stakeholders are invited to participate.

Where: Paul Robeson Campus Center
350 Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd
Multi-Purpose Room 231W and 232 E
